

Use of powerlines to transmit digital information is one of the worst concepts the FCC has ever considered, flying in the face of the Commission's duty to manage and preserve the spectrum for the public good.